

THE CENTRAL ASIAN MIGRANT EXPERIENCE IN TURKEY AND RUSSIA:
COMPARING POLITICAL SUBJECTIVITIES, DIASPORA POLITICS, AND CITIZEN-STATE RELATIONS

Workshop at the Department of Sociology, Boğaziçi University
15-17 January 2014
Şerif Mardin Seminar Room

WORKSHOP DESCRIPTION:

How does migration influence notions of political engagement and citizenship? In particular, how does migrating from Central Asia to Turkey or Russia change an individual's ideas about political leadership, nationalism, religiosity and belonging? For example, do migrants develop different ideas about governance, authoritarianism, freedom of speech or relationships between religion and state? What new group alliances and imaginations of Muslim-ness, Turkic-ness, Soviet-ness emerge, and how do these developments affect local and national political movements? How should we trace the historical dimensions of emerging political sensibilities, and the role of states in encouraging remitting, transnationalism and political participation? These are some of the theoretical and comparative questions that we will broach as part of an interdisciplinary and international group of researchers during a three day workshop. We hope to stimulate discussion not only among social scientists, but also within the Central Asian diaspora.
